SECTION B

The following resource relates to Question 3.

"The City of Culture thing is under way. The year is financed by 'partners' like Siemens, who get to choose the new artwork in the middle of town. This large, German TNC makes wind turbines in an old dock out in east Hull and being a major sponsor, (sorry 'partner'), they get to plonk, (sorry, 'tastefully place') bits of their product in the town square.

Oh to be sure it's officially a sculpture by the name of 'The Blade', but anyone can see this is just product placement advertising their company! I won't bore you with statistics of size and weight since I know you won't be impressed, let's just say it's big and ugly ... And you certainly don't want to know how it got here, let's just say the fairies left it overnight.

The locals, however, seem pleased with their gift and go up to it and touch it as if it wasn't real. All very odd, still if it keeps them happy I suppose it does no harm ... so much for regeneration!"

The following resource relates to Question 4.

“The landlord never got round to fixing my heating and hot water so the damp got worse. The children all have terrible coughs from the damp and it is freezing at this time of year. In the end a group of my friends paid for someone to come round. He found rat droppings behind the kitchen cabinets and said it was one of the worst infestations he had ever seen. The wires to the boiler had been eaten through!

We are using plug-in heaters that my friends lent me, but these use a lot of my benefit money. We go and wash our clothes at my best friend’s house. I have phoned the landlord but she never actually does anything.

I came to this country to keep my children safe. Sometimes I wonder if it was the right decision. At least they get to go to school and get a free meal.”
